A YUMMY IRISH SODA BREAD Recipe for you to try at home!

Ingredients

4½ cups of flour
1¼ cup sugar
2½ tsp baking powder
dash of salt
1 tsp baking soda
½ cup butter, softened
2½ cups raisins
2 cups buttermilk
½ cup heavy cream

- Preheat oven to 350 degrees
- To make 1 large loaf, use a 10-12 inch cast iron pan or ovenproof skillet with 2-inch or better sides or to make 2 loaves use 2 smaller cast iron skillets, oven proof pans or 2 cake pans.
- Cut a big enough circle of parchment paper out to line both the bottom and the sides of your pan(s).
- Whisk the first 5 ingredients in a large bowl until blended, add the butter and raisins and stir well.
- Add buttermilk, heavy cream and egg to the dry ingredients and stir until incorporated - do not over mix.
- Pour mixture into pan(s) and cook for one hour or until toothpick or skewer inserted comes out dry. For smaller loaves, check after 45 minutes, however, most likely it will take an hour to bake. Once a wooden skewer inserted comes out not "wet" it is done. Cool a bit then flip out of the pan(s), peel off parchment paper and allow the bread to cool on a cooling rack, that is if you don't just dig right in like my family and I do!

Drowsy flowers come to attention, waking from their

With heads turned upward towards the Maestro called
sun. I watch with anticipation as... the concert begins.”
